Asking for money

But then use the money on retarded trip

The gofundme was used to replenish lost funds on necessities

However I irresponsibly prioritised this trip

I'm going to use this video to be as transparent and open as possible to you the viewer, because many people want answers and want to hear my side and I want to take expressed accountability.

Justifiably many people are angry and I do not fault them for that, however some people are not treating this situation with the maturity and respect that it deserves, for the past day ive been receiving consistent threats, disgusting images being made of me, dox threats, swatting threats and many people have come away thinking that im a predator, which is not the case.

Wolfgang was 21 years old born on march 31st 2004, before engaging with him I made sure to ID verify and confirm that he was above the age of 18. He is 11 months older than me, while I am 20 myself. This case is not pedophilia whatsoever it is however, understandably degenerate.

This situation is absolutely criticisable, but this situation has nothing to do with predator allegations, and this is something that gwamgo himself has made clear numerous times and this was never once alleged in his video.

So comparing this situation to the likes of Koofy, EDP, Ava kris tyson or konekokitten does a disservice to their victims in the process and trivialises actual trauma children go through from predators.

and many people are even going as far as to compare me to the Austrian painter showing a complete lack of maturity when it comes to this situation.

Now over the course of the past week an extremely personal and private situation has been revealed to the public so I feel it necessary to discuss the situation openly on my platform, provide the full context being payment receipts, debunk the misinformation being spread but also most importantly; take complete and unilateral accountability for the gofundme and my extremely impulsive actions in the process that have harmed people who were my friends, and violated the trust of people who looked up to me.

I am not asking for forgiveness from this video, only that you simply hear my ENTIRE side before casting any final judgement after the video ends.

I'm going to be as transparent as possible in this video, proving that everyone is being actively refunded, while also proving that the money from the GoFundMe, was only used for rent and food as advertised, however taking accountability regardless for being extremely negligent with my finances and indirectly having broke the trust of my viewer base by indirectly scamming by definition.

I will also do my best to censor explicit aspects of this situation not only for viewer wellbeing but also because it is extremely personal to me.

Now, this all started due to a situation I had with another commentary YouTuber named Internet adjacent who once again was 21, older than me.

Now, somehow people who were unaware of the actual context to this situation, claimed that this was a situation pertaining to pedophilia, when that is simply not true, the other party was older than me.

This situation however, was extremely serious in its own regard and was emotionally taxing on both parties to deal with and it involved allegations of me having felt pressured and pushed at times into engaging sexually with Wolfgang despite me not reciprocating and my body language clearly showing how uncomfortable I was, with me having provided numerous screenshots corroborating the fact that in private messages, i was disengaged, created excuses or aired to avoid sexual contact after we met.

What has been used however to somehow prove that ive lied in this, have been examples of fawn responses I made in reply, subtly conceding to these propositions, merely to avoid conflict. Situations to do with consent are complicated, very intricate and should be treated seriously.

Older messages made before we met up, have been used to spin the narrative that i was open to doing it when we were in person, this is not true, a multitude of factors made it so I didn't feel comfortable, however I have always had a problem with saying no directly.

Furthermore Wolfgang is getting a mental health evaluation as he himself acknowledges that he is not good at understanding body language or social cues.

Now due to the situation initially being slowly discussed to more people behind the scenes, commentary YouTubers were essentially pushing for this all to become public.

I however expressedly wanted this not to become a public spectacle because it covered extremely fragile topics in relation to me that I did not want out, so on numerous occasions I was seen telling mutuals and to Wolfgang himself for both of us to leave this situation alone and not escalate the problem as it was extremely stressful.

However due to internal pushing from other parties, internet adjacent came out on 10th November with his google document to get ahead of the situation.

And this put me in an extremely stressful and compromising position, I had initially believed we had agreed to make this private, however the position I found myself in now was that I felt obligated to respond and to be as transparent as possible about everything that happened, or I would be ruthlessly attacked and seen as a liar if I didn't provide the full context or simply ignored the situation.

I knew that I'd be mocked despite the situation being extremely emotional and personal, and I felt as if there was not much I could do, despite mutuals in private telling me to just disengage.

When the situation became a public affair, I was prodded to push my document out for people to understand my side, and due to poor judgement and fear that if I didn't release my document, I'd be labeled a liar, I went through with it.

I overshared in extensive details the context of the situation, and despite me displaying trigger warnings at the very start of the document to warn people about how serious this was urging them to disengage if the topics were triggering, that does not excuse the fact that I should have been a lot more restrictive in what I discussed due to my platform and the audience I have cultivated, it was wholly irresponsible and extremely fucking gross looking back, because this could have all been so easily avoided, it was essentially reputational self destruction. As close friends have stated, this should have been completely out of the question, it was not done with malintent, but in no means does that excuse how degenerate this all was.

I have a habit of not thinking before i act and understanding how my actions affect others, and how those actions could have a knock on affect on my associates and close friends in the process, when these people attempt to give advice while im not in a good mental headspace, i lash out and take it the wrong way because i cannot properly distinguish between criticism and hate,

And I want to make it clear that mental health should not even be an excuse for the way i mistreated friends.

What Gwamgo and others did in this situation is the morally correct thing for them to do. I should be criticised and I do not ask to be defended, because my impulsiveness has been a persistent issue for years.

Now Id like to make it clear that I never shared this document on my channel or discord, but the damage was done already when I pushed it out without thinking. And now I have to bare the consequences of oversharing this embarrassing information such as bringing up context to do with Wolfgangs Cinderella, which was wholly unnecessary. I should have sought legal advise or had consulted more people I trusted with the creation of this document, and I fault myself for that, it is no one else's responsibility other than mine at the age of 20.

Now from Wolfgangs initial document, the largest outstanding claim against me, was the fact that when me and him met along with other close friends, I paid for his passport and plane ticket that amounted to collectively 1.4 thousand dollars as well as a gaming laptop that was 1.6k and weeks beforehand a new iPhone that was about 800.

Now this was rightly criticised by people on Twitter, and understandably that seemed as if I used funds from the GoFundMe to pay for the ticket and laptop, and appeared as if I maliciously scammed people and misappropriated the money for luxuries rather than necessities.

My gofundme asked people willing enough, to donate to me so I can use it for food and annemities such as rent, and also for potential other actions if I decide to take them.

When i created this Gofundme, i did not consider my impulsive and irrational financial choices, and despite only ever intending to use the funds generously donated to pay for rent, food and amenities, i should have recognised that with the position that I have, I needed to handle my finances more responsibly at the time.

I jumped the gun, didn't think before i acted, and regret conducting myself in that way.

What I am showing on screen right now is proof that the money garnered from the GoFundMe was used to pay for not only my university accommodation, but also food proving that the money was not misappropriated, and that my intent was to never spend the money on anything but on what i advertised.

What is also being provided is proof that since the past month in October compared to now, I have been down 4.5k dollars, further complicated by the fact that I was temporarily homeless due to an alleged domestic abuse situation at my family's household. For a period of time I had to stay with a friend after I ran out my house, and while I had made a police report on the specific abuse situation.

Now you can absolutely criticise me for my horrible spending habits, especially for having paid an extensive amount of money on a plane ticket. I made a massive mistake and I did genuinely fuck up, I don't want to be excused or defended for it because I shouldn't and you shouldn't waste your time defending a mistake as egregious as this.

I was not at all transparent as I should have been about my finances and that is inherently deceptive for me to have done. Despite the platform that I have accumulated and the responsibility and influence it comes with, I proceed to continue to screw up time and time again on monolithic levels and that has now caused harm to friends, family and to people who had trusted me very much with their money and had donated to me they believed I was initially at a worse financial point.

I take full accountability for the act of indirectly scamming and for that reason, I have taken steps to give the money back after I had my dad transfer funds to my account which I am actively using to refund everyone who donated to the GoFundMe, and I will ensure to never make a gofundme again because I have violated trust and it cannot be simply amended, and now moving forward I will take advise from close friends in private on how to deal with finances moving forward.

Now for context on why I bought this plane ticket for Internet adjacent to meet me, it was because I was desperate for social contact because close family was threatening me about how I would die in prison among other horrific things, and due to how stressful the situation was, I wanted to hold on to any sense of normalcy i had by having a social trip with friends and Internet adjacent Internet adjacent too, was equally desperate for a relationship and for this meet-up because he believed it would solve his mental issues, and while there was partial hesitancy for me to purchase the plane ticket, the prices continued to skyrocket and I felt pushed to get them in the window of opportunity we had available to meet as all parties were extremely busy and this was the only time we were free.

The payment on that ticket and passport were ridiculously expensive and ate away at my funds which were already decreasing while I was already getting no revenue flow, due to my channel having 2 strikes and being fearful of a third, and it perfectly shows how desperate, pathetic and embarrassingly lonely I was, I do not deny that and I do not argue with the fact many people may not take me seriously and perceive me in a much different light now, and there is nothing much I can do other than embrace the surrealism of the situation that I have now put myself in.

Now In regards to the payment on the phone and laptop, I wanted new devices for communication, after the police confiscated my old ones back in September after the false police report, the laptop was vital because I would use it for video creation and editing new videos, this was because I was in an extremely tough spot and I wanted the ability to create more content so I could have a stream of revenue again, hence why later I wanted to create content for gwamgo.

However in regards to all of this, I was extremely negligent and not transparent when it came to the ticket, phone and laptop and I genuinely did NOT see this because I was already in a bad financial situation at the time and was incredibly desperate. It was a severe case of tunnel vision which I am incredibly sorry for, and I should be criticised for it.

I never claimed I was broke, however I absolutely understand if people got that impression from the nature of the gofundme and the fault is absolutely on me.

To gwamgo and his associates, who I know have been extremely embarrassed and personally affected by this because they were closely associated, I'm extremely sorry for lashing out impulsively again, I was a bad friend who didn't see the consequences of putting this all out, this is a continuing repeat pattern in my behaviour, and despite claiming I would change, I always end up reverting back to being extremely self destructive, and that is why people understandably dislike me.

And I want to go another step further in this all, in the past, and relatively recently, I've made extremely controversial, abrasive and politically charged comments, that are absolutely not acceptable and I do not stand by now. I want to apologise not only to Muslims who watch my channel, but also my viewers in general, I have not been a good advocate for safety or a positive role model for anyone, and I am not someone who can be trusted with a platform and the responsibility of it, at least certainly right now. The shit I have said, whether it was to illicit a funny reaction, is not acceptable, and although I can sit by and say I will change, I want to prove via action that I can and will.

My political stance has changed drastically when engaging in new circles, speaking to new people, and educating myself. For a while I engaged with extremely abrasive right wing propaganda as clearly seen when I made trump edits, but now I look back at my stance and the actions that reflected my stance last year in disgust, as I also look back at my behaviour recently with the same disgust.

When I referred to Tanookis ex girlfriend imkatt, I did not intend to reference her ethnicity in a racist or bigoted way, although THAT IS how it seemed to people, and I apologise if it was interpreted in that way, however in actuality i was highlighting allegations of her controversial past which had to do with her stance on white people. Again I'd like to make it abundantly clear, this was not a racially engineered insult.

To Rinn, a friend ive known for a while, my response to you in mental crisis was self centered, lacked empathy and was extremely uncalled for. Despite the fact that I had my own issues to deal with in 2024, under no circumstances does that give me the right to have brushed off your situation which was clearly putting you under distress.

And to TazD and TanookiAlex respectively to both of you, regardless of if you'd accept an apology because im certain that you have your reasons for why you won't and I don't fault you,

Me currently being in a position now where I can step back out of an echo chamber and im being justifiably called out the damage caused in the past by my irrational and erratic actions. I now have the ability to look back at all that has happened and I do want to apologise, to tazd, I believed unsubstantiated claims and pushed them without getting your side and being cynical that you too were catfished which is ironic given the position that I was in myself.

I misinterpreted TanookiAlex's years of attempting to help me in private or giving brutal but needed criticisms as a personal attack, I was needlessly abrasive and aggressive in response best seen recently i over exaggerated the situation and did not respect tanookialexs safety advocacy that undeniably has done more benefit that my work.

Now while I'd like to maintain the position that I did not harass her, I did not make any videos, I did not defame her as a predator and I did not make any false illicit content claims against her, that does not excuse my immature conduct and for that I will absolutely apologise.

Now however I do have a problem with the way TanookiAlex does signalboost people who have done objectively bad things without verifying the situation. She is seen liking a comment of whispers who is a known predator who posted illicit content on their old alias xdgamer, they are a criminal who has used this situation to spread misinformation for their own personal benefit.

I also do have a problem with TanookiAlexs support to Euina, I'd like to make it clear, I never accused Euina of having illicit content, however a fan of hers who impersonated as me, did post illicit content in her server and it took hours for the moderation team to remove it. This was not a fan or friend of mine, and euina has been extremely contradictory with her side of the story regarding this. Also her history of making suggestive content or making suggestive UGC items pushed towards children, or her negligence in posting Roblox explicit images; is also absolutely criticisable.

However, it is important for me to understand that the guilty by association fallacy is not a valid argument to necessarily make to devalue her character, I shouldn't have been headstrong, I shouldn't have been too ignorant to accept fault, and I shouldn't have been focused on bringing up disjointed situations in the past to deflect the topic of conversation.

Now with this situation playing out the way it has, under no circumstances does this now alleviate the actions of actual problematic individuals who have been called out in the past, I've seen people defend objectively now horrible people.

I have made a lot of mistakes, 1 mistake too many now, but that does not now make these people who have also caused harm and have been called out, suddenly innocent, that is fundamentally not how it works.

As most situations like this transpire, anger is high and misinformation spreads around a lot in a mob like mentality, with often times a lot of bad actors attempt to use these situations to piggyback and claw back at getting attention, or attempt to devalue or dismiss their own actions or accusations off the back of this situation;

Now while my criticism is perfectly valid and i understand it completely, I do hope a situation like this does now excuse people to forgive and replatform controversial users who have done objectively disgusting and irredeemable things, I have seen people defending the UTTP and even attempting to signalboost known predators with the false pre-tense that these users are innocent or were right all along, they are not.

No one foresaw this, no one predicted this, not even I did, genuinely no one could have predicted this level of stupidity and lack of oversight. It wasn't bound to happen, but because of how irresponsible I am, it certainly isn't a shock that it did.

The plan now is to rectify my mistakes and past actions, leave the Parlo name for the foreseeable future and work on myself. I want to prove via action that I am changing, rather than just saying it and reverting back to my old ways.

A wake up call like this was probably necessary regardless, because this channel and keeping up this kind of content was extremely mentally damaging.

The plan now is to rectify my mistakes and past actions, And take some time off to work on myself, learn from the many mistakes i've made throughout this and in my past, and get to understand the responsibility of being a youtuber like myself. I want to prove via action that I am changing, rather than just saying it and reverting back to my old ways.

A wake up call like this was necessary regardless, my conduct has been wholly unacceptable, and it's inexplicably prevalent that i need to change my ways.